Whatever differences of opinion may exist with regard to the complicity of other and prominent members of a ed as follows political organization in the northern States, with Brown and his fanatical gang at Harper's Ferry, there can be none with us as the real cause of the foolish demonstration. And it becomes our citizens carefully to reflect upon the relation of cause and effect in this matter, and to govern themselves accordingly.

Brown is an enthusiast, a fanatic, it is said. Let us concede this. He has acted injudiciously for the cause to which he was devoted. He has anticipated the sentiments and purposes of the great mass of the republican party. Granted. He has done an act so unwise and ill-considered that none are so reckless as to applaud, even among the foremost ranks of the anti-slavery crusade. Only a few wild abolitionists approve his condoctrines.

upon the existence of slavery. It has no other vital elsewhere. element. Whatever it may affect outside of the slavery issue that is its only source of vitality. Could slavery be abolished to day the republican party would be like a great, lubberly boy deprived of his plaything. The slavery question is thus used by politicians for the sole purpose of working out political ends for personal aggrandizement. But this republicanism includes in its ranks thousands of men who are actuated by a morbid zeal, a prudential enthusiasm in behalf of the slave .-They do not cleave together as a party merely for political purposes, but to gratify that idiocrasy which predominates in their moral constitution. Amongst these, again, are multitudes so inflamed with passion and preindice upon this theme that they are but a single remove from demonstrative fanatics, and they will hear and gloat upon the harangues of demagogues, who talk flippantly about insurrection, burnings, bloodshed and dis- his life. We do not want to see him hung; but his solution of the Union. They are ready, if the opportu-

The success of the republican party will be to this class of men the warrant for any excess their zeal and fury may contemplate as of possible accomplishment .-The republicans will have a plurality in the ensuing Congress, and they threaten by combination with others the exercise of a formidable power for the promotion of their peculiar tenets. Here is annoyance enough to men of national feeling, and danger in the apprehension of many. There are those who fear that republicanism may elect the next President. We do not partake of this fear, because we have faith in a conservatism superior to prejudice-a loyalty to the Constitution and the Union superior to the mere impulses of perverted sentiment .-But let us concede for a moment the possibility of such a thing. Suppose a republican President elected in 1860, a republican cabinet, a republican congress, wielding all the power of government, who among us can fail to anticipate the consequences?' Some may affect to would be capable also of holding in restraint the furious | the consequence, and until the and fanatical spirits now only kept in subjection by a say that such a government would be powerless to prevent just such demonstrations, only much more formidable, as that of Ossawatamie Brown. There might be no complicity on the part of the government; there might be an apparent effort to restrain and subdue the impetuous zeal of the abolitionists and anti-slavery cohorts: but it would be vain. Collision between the North and South would be almost inevitable, while none can venture to predict what plots and intrigues and scenes of strife would be engendered.

without just ground to believe that such fruits would ensue from the national predominance of the doctrines in question? If so, we have an illustration in point and directly in hand. In the city of Baltimore, at this day, we see a class of men in complete control of this commun nity; defiant of law; impatient of all restraint; men to whom wrong and outrage, fraud and violence are common means to public ends; men who either command or receive the favor and protection of the authorities; men who forbid suffrage to honest citizenship, and corrupt the ballot-box with the most complete impunity. But when in the name of party these things first appeared they were held within bounds; there was a limit to licentiousness which beguiled many good citizens of their judgment and foresight. Now this licentiousness, fullblown and utterly without decency, restraint or fear of consequences, does what it will, and there is no authority to lift a hand against it; men look on with awe and shame, and wonder what interposing miracle shall ever bring it to an end. With us the evil is local; the misgeneral and sectional, and is therefore less formidable than that which threatens the country from the ascendancy of republicanism. But in just the same proportion as lawless zeal is affiliated with party and personal ambition amongst the republicans, so will it be impossible to restrain it under the excitement and violent impulses of success, and the absence of that broad patriotism which must ever constitute the basis of salutary political ascendancy. The people of Baltimore, men of all Maryland should see to it, that they do not by any imprudence lend their sanction, even by implication-by indifference to-much less by any sort of affiliation with, this dangerous heresy .- Baltimore Sun.

Mobbing an Incendiary Paper in Kentucky.— The assemblage then proceeded to the obnoxious office. The Commercial says:

Maj. Hallam approached within speaking distance, and stated to Mr. Bailey that no harm was intended or would be done to him or his family, and requested him to open his door. This Mr. Bailey refused to do, and begged the crowd to reconsider its intention, offering, at the same time, to admit to the columns of his paper any objection any citizen had to any article published

A number of persons then seized a ladder lying upon the pavement and attempted to place it against a window in the second story, but a painter who was at work there appeared at the window and threatened to hurl a hatchet at the first who would attempt to ascend. A young man named Barry Taylor immediately produced of the articles to be found in his Furniture Ware Rooms : a revolver, but it was wrested from his grasp by one of nor, who showed her determination to execute her threat; they withdrew to a safe distance from the range of her missiles, while she stood firm and ready to hurl them .-One man, more brave than the others, made a race for the door, but barley escaped the inevitable brick-bat; others followed, and by feints and dodges succeeded in into the building.

they proceeded to take the press to pieces, and carry the additions to our magnificent stock. type into the street, but a number of half-grown boys commenced an indiscriminate destruction of every article they could find. Type were scattered, cases and furniture were thrown from the windows upon the sidewalk, and portions of the press, by this time detached, were hurled down the stairs and broken.

A wagon was loaded with fragments of the press and other articles belonging to the composing room and conveyed to Dodsworth's coal-yard on the corner of Front and Lawrence streets. Another load was deposited on the ferry wharf-boat, and a third was thrown into the CURES SICK HEADACHE.

FASHIONABLE FOLLY .- The Boston Journal speaking of the long dresses at present in vogue, says : " Unnecessarily long as ladies dresses were the past season, an extra tuck seems to have been let out this spring .-Any one walking up Washington street on a pleasant afternoon will meet crowds of fashionably dressed women | ver county. with the extra ornament of a couple of inches of dust and dirt around the bottom of their dresses. REVIEW OF THE WILMINGTON MARKET. FOR THE WEEK ENDING NOVEMBER 10TH, 1859.

TURPENTINE-Has been in moderate enquiry for shipping and distilling purposes during the week just ended, and the market has ruled steady at $3 for virgin and yellow dip and $1 75 for hard, per 280 lbs .- all brought in having changed hands at above figures. There is but little arriving from above tide-way, owing to the low stage of the water courses, and the larger portion received has been by railroad. The sales foot up only 2,059 bbls., as follows: Bbls. Virgin. Yel. Dip. Saturday..... 300....... 3 00....... 1 75 Vednesday... 669...... 3 00...... 3 00......
